Group A Streptococcus (GAS) is a bacterium that can cause a wide range of infections. They are the etiologic agents of 'Strep throat' (pharyngitis) It is easily treated with penicillin, ampicillin or cephalosporins. Untreated or improperly treated streptococcal pharyngitis may lead to development of rheumatic fever / rheumatic heart disease or glomerulonephritis in the patient. Children in the school-going age group are more prone to get strep throat and rapid diagnosis and prompt treatment will protect them from developing the dreaded sequelae.

MICROBIOLOGICAL LABORATORY is now offering a highly sensitive NAAT (nucleic acid amplification test) which will give you a semi-quantitative result (heavy, moderate, scanty) on the presence of Group A Streptococci in the throat swab within 4 to 6 hours. The test is priced at the same level as rapid antigen tests which have a poor sensitivity compared to culture.

Group A Streptococcus (GAS) is a bacterium that can cause a wide range of infections. They are the etiologic agents of 'Strep throat' (pharyngitis) It is easily treated with penicillin, ampicillin or cephalosporins. Untreated or improperly treated streptococcal pharyngitis may lead to development of rheumatic fever / rheumatic heart disease or glomerulonephritis in the patient. Children in the school-going age group are more prone to get strep throat and rapid diagnosis and prompt treatment will protect them from developing the dreaded sequelae.

MICROBIOLOGICAL LABORATORY is now offering a highly sensitive NAAT (nucleic acid amplification test) which will give you a semi-quantitative result (heavy, moderate, scanty) on the presence of Group A Streptococci in the throat swab within 4 to 6 hours. The test is priced at the same level as rapid antigen tests which have a poor sensitivity compared to culture.
